

DAVID PARISI, AIA

David Parisi has worked in the architectural profession for over thirty years. As a Senior Associate, his numerous responsibilities include the management of the Greenwich, Connecticut and New York offices, performing as Project Manager for major architectural projects in the northeast, and working as the client/architect contract negotiator for all offices. In addition, he is the firm's Chief Operating Officer, communicating daily with project managers, accountants, and administrative personnel.

Education/Licensing

B.S., Architecture, Syracuse University
Studies in Structural Design, University of California at Berkeley
Registered Architect, New York and Connecticut

Experience with Allan Greenberg, Architect, LLC:

During his twenty-one years with the office, David has overseen the construction and renovation of many residential and commercial buildings. He has managed a wide variety of projects, ranging from the design of garden furniture, fine cabinetry, lighting and bath fixtures to a 40,000-s.f. residence in Connecticut's Litchfield hills.

Currently, he is involved with large residential projects in New Jersey and Bucks County, PA; and residential renovations in Fairfield, CT and Greenwich, CT and Bedford, NY. He is also working on the restoration of and addition to a Bedford residence designed by the late architect Mott Schmidt.

Previous projects include the renovation of a Long Island, NY residence and a new pool house; a working farm in Bedford, NY consisting of a new residence, restoration of historic structures, and the integration of new and existing farm buildings and gardens; a 30,000-s.f. residence on the Connecticut coast that combined subterranean parking, three floors of finely crafted woodwork, decorative plaster, metal, and stone, culminating in an ornate French-crafted, copper dome; the transformation of modern Greenwich offices into a traditional setting for the U.S. headquarters of England's oldest maker of men's clothing; and the restoration of a residence designed by the late modern architect, Marcel Breuer.

Other Professional Experience:

He has previous experience with all project phases including design, construction documents, and construction contract administration. As construction contract administrator, David oversaw the construction of a 120,000-s.f. corporate world headquarters in London, England and was the liaison between the London-based client and the Connecticut architectural firm. In addition to his administrative duties, he worked closely with the client's directors to facilitate the move of all personnel into these new quarters including fabrication and procurement of custom designed furnishings, accessories, lighting fixtures, and decorative arts.
